BYRD CENTER SYMPOSIUM - Climate Change Research at Ohio State

Where: Byrd Polar & Climate Research Center, Scott Hall on West Campus

When: Mar 22, 2019 | All Day

Deadline: Friday, March 1, 2019

Register: <https://byrd.osu.edu/symposium/register>

The inaugural Byrd Center Symposium on Climate Change Research at Ohio State aims to consolidate all of the climate research at OSU under one roof for one day, in order to better connect climate researchers and students here at the university. All climate research done on campus is being featured: the geologic history of earth's climate, physical drivers of climate and how water and energy cycles are responding, how climate change impacts ecosystems, how society is adapting to climate change, how we think about and talk about climate, and everything in between.

Soil Science Research Day

Where: Kottman Hall, 2021 Coffey Road, Columbus, OH 43210

When: March 28, 2019 | 1:00 PM - 3:00 PM

Deadline to submit abstracts: March 4, 2019

Abstracts & any questions/concerns submit to: Soilsymposium@osu.edu

The inaugural Ohio State Soil Science Research Day includes keynote speaker, Dr. Gary Pierzynski, followed by a poster symposium featuring research from students, post-docs, and faculty from across the University.

The goal of the Soil Science Research Day is to promote soil science across all disciplines and to increase awareness of its importance to the environment, society, and economy.

There will be a grad student poster competition with cash prizes for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd; abstracts for any and all research related to soil science are welcomed. Posters that have previously been presented are also accepted.
